THE UNIVERSITY of EDINBURGH

Edinburgh Research Explorer

Feminist Institutionalism

Citation for published version:

Mackay, F & Waylen, G 2009, 'Feminist Institutionalism: Critical Perspectives on Gender and Politics', Politics & Gender, vol. 5, no. 2, pp. 237-280. <https://doi.org/10.1017/S1743923X09000178>

Digital Object Identifier (DOI):

10.1017/S1743923X09000178

Link:

Link to publication record in Edinburgh Research Explorer

Document Version:

Publisher's PDF, also known as Version of record

Published In:

Politics & Gender

Publisher Rights Statement:

© Mackay, F., & Waylen, G. (2009). Feminist Institutionalism: Critical Perspectives on Gender and Politics. Politics & Gender, 5(2), 237-280doi: 10.1017/S1743923X09000178

General rights

Copyright for the publications made accessible via the Edinburgh Research Explorer is retained by the author(s) and / or other copyright owners and it is a condition of accessing these publications that users recognise and abide by the legal requirements associated with these rights.

Take down policy

The University of Edinburgh has made every reasonable effort to ensure that Edinburgh Research Explorer content complies with UK legislation. If you believe that the public display of this file breaches copyright please contact openaccess@ed.ac.uk providing details, and we will remove access to the work immediately and investigate your claim.

CRITICAL PERSPECTIVES ON GENDER AND POLITICS

Feminist Institutionalism

Fiona Mackay and Georgina Waylen

doi:10.1017/S1743923X09000178

The “institutional turn” in both feminist and mainstream political science has been well documented. However, despite some common preoccupations, little work to date done by feminist political scientists has explored the uses of neoinstitutionalist scholarship in the development of feminist institutionalist frameworks. This Critical Perspectives collection of contributions explores the limits and possibilities of the dominant institutionalist approaches. Each of the first four pieces outlines the potential contribution of its preferred type — rational choice, historical, sociological, and discursive institutionalism — to a feminist institutionalism. The contributors address a number of key questions: What can their (neo)institutionalist approach contribute to feminist scholarship on political institutions, broadly defined? If there is a feminist institutionalism, what might it consist of in theoretical and analytical terms? How can it be used and what are its limits? The final contribution stands back and, taking a more critical stance, considers what gendered and institutionally focused feminist work could contribute to mainstream institutionalist understandings of structure and agency in political life. We intend for these Critical Perspectives essays to play a part in the development of a feminist institutionalism.