Dear Jack,

I am delighted to inform you that you have been short-listed for the College of Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences Teacher of the Year Award, as part of the Students' Association's 2021 student-led Teaching Awards. The Teaching Awards are an opportunity for students to express their gratitude to the staff who have taught and supported them during their time at Edinburgh, something that is more important than ever this year.

We received a staggering 2844 nominations across our 10 categories this year and the short-list was decided by a panel entirely made up of students, so this is a significant achievement. Congratulations!

You are invited to view the Virtual Ceremony on the Students' Association Facebook Page on Wednesday 12th May. More information regarding the ceremony will be sent to you closer to the time.

As you know, we have been celebrating all staff throughout the year via the Students' Association's social media pages as well as the University's Hybrid Teaching Exchange. You can also view the full list of staff nominated this year on our Roll of Honour. We are also excited to announce the introduction of a new podcast – a member of the Teaching Award Team will be in touch shortly to discuss this opportunity, and how you can take part if you are interested!

A huge part of the ceremony is hearing from the potential winners about their work, and what this means to them having been recognised by students for their outstanding contribution.

We kindly ask you to record a short video (1-2 minutes), that can be shown during the ceremony on the 12th May when the results are announced, and if chosen by the panellists as this year's winner would be presented as your winner's speech. If possible, please upload your video to this folder by Monday 19th April. The video should be filmed in landscape and we ask that you try to centre yourself as much as possible in the picture, as there will be a banner and some subtitles surrounding you.

The short-list will be announced on our website and social media channels during the week commencing 26th April. We also kindly ask that news of your short-list remain confidential until this point, as other nominated staff will not be aware until this time.

Congratulations once again on this achievement from all of us at the Students' Association; we hope to celebrate with you in person soon!

Best Wishes,

Natalie Hay
